

Old friends

For people with history. The old nights, the teasing, the stories you both still tell.

HOW IT GOES

- Light the candle. Phones away. Pick the set that fits your table.
- Take turns reading a question aloud. Answer, or pass — no one is pressed, no one is cross-examined.
- Work down the list at your own pace; the lighter questions come first.
- When someone is ready to end the evening, they call the last question — always the same one.
- Everyone answers, and you blow the candle out together.
- Tomorrow night, light it again and carry on where you left off.

THE QUESTIONS

- 01 What's a night from back then we still talk about?
- 02 What did you make of me when we first met?
- 03 What's the daftest thing we ever did together?
- 04 What did we get away with that we really shouldn't have?
- 05 What's a song that throws you straight back to those years?
- 06 What were we dead certain about back then that turned out completely wrong?
- 07 Who were we each trying to be back then?
- 08 What's something from those days you've never told me?
- 09 What's a moment you were prouder of me than you let on?
- 10 What's changed most about you since then — and what hasn't at all?
- 11 What do you know now that you wish we'd known then?
- 12 If we could do one thing from back then one more time, what would it be?

THE LAST QUESTION, ALWAYS

What's one small thing that made today better?

WHAT WAS SAID BY THE CANDLE STAYS BY THE CANDLE.
